DETAILED ACTIONClaim Rejections 35 U.S.C. 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1-34 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Adan et al. (USPN 6373047) in view of (USPN 6396477) and Duphorne (USPN 6212265).

Regarding claims 1, 6, and 28, Adan teaches an input device system including a processing unit (21), a hard disk drive (27), a magnetic disk drive (28) and optical disk drive along with associated computer readable media storing computer readable instructions. Adan also teaches that when mouse (42) is moved over high-resolution zone (144), a control component determines that the mouse is over a zone having a predetermined pattern. See Fig 1 and Fig 6. However, Adan does not teach an illumination member of an input device that changes states. Katrinecz on the other hand teaches a data entry device including a mouse, which has a feature of illumination with various characteristics. See col. 1, lines 10-15 and 55-57.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Adan's input device system to include Katrinecz's illuminating feature. One would have been motivated in view of the suggestion in Katrinecz that the illuminating feature is functionally equivalent to the desired illuminating member of the input device. The use of an illuminating feature in an input device helps control visual attributes and functionalities as taught by Katrinecz.

Adan has been described above. However, Adan does not teach the use of input device in connection to step of determining in a computer whether a predetermined event has occurred. Duphorne discloses an email notification device (20) including an alert system indicating means, which activates upon receipt of the email notification signal (40) so that a user can retrieve the email messages from personal computer. See col. 7, lines 12-31, Fig1 and Fig 6.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Adan's computer system to adapt Duphorne's email notification feature. One would have been motivated in view of the suggestion in Duphorne that the email notification equivalently performs the desired determination of a predetermined event. The use of email notification device helps function a computer system with Internet connection.

Regarding claim 2, Adan teaches the use of an input device for the purpose of providing specialized messages to the computer. See Fig 11.

Regarding claims 3-5, 21-23 and 30-32, Katrinecz teaches the use of illumination with various colors and intensities. See col. 2, lines 14-18 and 19-31.

Regarding claims 7 and 27, Adan teaches a "mouse message hook" that executes and returns a value to the operating system (35). See col. 7, lines 15-20.

Regarding claims 8-15, 25-26 and 29, Adan's Fig 10B (192, 196).

Regarding claims 16-18, Adan teaches a control component (124) with respect to a predetermined time out period and the velocity of the mouse over the surface (116). See col. 9, lines 28-44.

Regarding claims 19-20, Adan teaches the use of the input deice with respect to game applications utilize the functionalities of the device. See Fig 3.

Art Unit: 2674

Regarding claim 24, Adan teaches the input device system for providing position information based on the movement of the input device. See col. 1, lines 24-28.

Regarding claims 33-34, see Adan's Fig 2A (42).

Conclusion

2. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered to applicant's disclosure.
